Dies From Fall

Mr. James Finn, son of the late James and Mary Finn died Wednesday, September 15, at 4:40 a.m., from the effects of a fall from a third story window of his boarding house 235 Second St., Louisville Friday of last week. Mr. Finn had returned to his room early Friday evening had lighted a cigar, and seating himself in the window had fallen asleep; losing his balance he fell to the pavement below a distance of about fifty feet. His right thigh was fractured and he sustained severe internal injuries which finally caused his death. The window from which he fell overlooked a sideyard consequently the unfortunate accident was not discovered for several hours; Mr. Finn was at once removed to the City Hospital, Mr. John Finn his brother of this city, and his sisters Mesdames Gam and Monroe Hurst and Mrs. Julia Stocker when notified hastened to his bedside. Finding his condition too serious to admit of his removal to the home of his relatives, every comfort and everything known to medical science to alleviate his suffering or promote his recovery was called into requisition, all to no avail, after intense suffering though fully conscious the greater portion of the time, death ended his sufferings. Mr. Finn was born in Bardstown 41 years ago. He was a man of fine intellect a genius in fact in many respects noted for his wit a genial companion devoted to his friends, of a generous nature and a kindly spirit towards all. The funeral took place from St. Joseph's church, Tuesday September 16—Bardstown Standard

August term of the Washington County Court, August 23, 1909

This day came W. P. Pinkston and filed a petition signed by twenty legal voters of Brush Grove voting precinct No. 12 of Washington County, Kentucky, and moved the court to hold an election at the next regular November election, 1909, to take the vote in said precinct whether or not stock shall be allowed to run at large in said precinct. It is therefore ordered that the Sheriff and officers of said election will open the polls and have placed on their ballots whether or not stock shall be allowed to run at large in said precinct.

Copy Attest, W. F. Booker, Clk.

Dies Suddenly in Oklahoma.

A telegram was received here early Tuesday morning stating that Joseph P. Merkley, aged about 23 years, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Merkley had died at his home at Ardmore, Oklahoma, the night before at 10:30 o'clock. The telegram was received by Mrs. J. W. Miller, a sister of Mr. Merkley's wife, but it did not state the cause of his death. The message advised that the remains would be shipped to Lawrenceburg for interment, and Mrs. Miller left Tuesday morning to attend the burial. The plans, however were later changed and the interment took place at Shawnee, Oklahoma, the home of the young man's parents. The cause of young Mr. Merkley's death could not be learned Inquiry of relatives at Lawrenceburg by phone elicited the fact that a telegram had been received there stating that he had on Monday met with an accident and had been seriously hurt, but the nature of the accident was not known.—Lebanon Enterprise.

Big Show Coming

Friday, September 24 will be Show Day for the John H. Sparks World's Famous Shows. then the rare, unique and wonderful things that have been promised on paper will become a reality.

The airy riders who, in diaphanous shirts have been pirouetting on the expensive back of tremendously speedy circus horses—on the bill-boards—will be seen in all the gorgeousness of tulle and seductive smile; the elephants will copy their pictured acts of comedy and go them one better; the contortionist will proceed to disentangle himself from the knots he tied in his responsive limbs last year; the acrobatic family will turn dizzy somersaults and the clown will work off his time-honored comedy on the confiding audience.

There is nothing on earth in the amusement line like a circus. It is the people's show par excellence. The expert knows what is coming every minute of the show, but he wouldn't have it changed for worlds. The very conventionalism of much of the performance is what makes it so delightful.

The merit in a big circus like the Sparks shows is in the fact that everything in the show is the very best of the kind. There must inevitably be riding acts, but the riders are the leaders of their profession. There must be acrobats, but the acrobatic artist and aerialist are gathered from the wide world, and are the best that money can secure.

It is this superiority in the quality of the performers that makes the Sparks Shows a welcome visitor.

Estimable Woman

Was Mrs. J. Polin Edelen Who Died Last Week.

After fighting long and heroically against a most painful disease, Mrs. Nannie Edelen died Wednesday, September 15, 1909 About one year ago her health began to fail, at that time she suffered a severe attack of sickness from which it was thought she had nearly recovered, but in the spring of this year, the hopes that had been raised by her apparent recovery were to be displaced by disappointment, for the old trouble began to manifest itself in an aggravated form. In the hope of bettering her health an operation was advised and performed. It then developed that her case was hopeless, as she was found to be suffering from cancer of the liver. After a few weeks at St. Joseph's Infirmary in Louisville, she was removed to her home, where she remained until her death.

Mrs. Edelen was born in Washington county, March 19, 1850, and during the whole of her life remained a resident of her native county. She was a daughter of the late John H. McInture who for many years served the people of this county in the official position of County Judge and is favorably remembered as a man of absolute fairness and the strongest integrity. On September 20, 1870 she was married to J. Polin Edelen to which union twelve children were born, eight of whom with her husband survive, namely, Walter, Roy, George, Joseph and Thomas Edelen, Mrs. W. T. Leachman and Misses Pearl and Stella Edelen, all of whom are residents of this county.

Mrs. Edelen was an exemplary christian woman possessing all those virtues which go to make a noble character. She was never happier than when doing something to alleviate the pain and suffering of those in sickness or distress and whatever acts of charity she performed was done for charity's sake for she never sought to place them in the public glare in order to gain the applause of the world, for she was satisfied when she knew in her own heart that she had done the right as she saw it, and when once her path of duty was clear to her mind she was absolutely fearless in the discharge of that duty.

Funeral services were conducted Friday at St. Rose where a High Requeim Mass was sung by Rev. Father Kennedy, after which the remains were laid to rest in St Rose cemetery. The large crowd which was present and the many beautiful floral designs was evidence of the high esteem in which she was held. So consistent was her life in its every phase that were we to write it in one word, that word would be "Sincerity."

Ears Torn Off.

Rufus Maynard, a prominent farmer residing near Welltown, just over the line from Boyle county in Casey county, was called to his door Sunday night by two unknown men who then attacked him In the scuffle that ensued both of Maynard's ears were torn from his head and his nose was literally mashed off his face. He is still alive but in a critical condition. Maynard's family was aroused by the noise of the fight and Maynard's calls for help and went to his assistance, but the men were gone. Sheriff Lincoln Wells has organized a posse and is searching the country for the men, but as he has no clew on which to work is not expected to be very successful What caused the two men to attack Maynard is not known. When he was called he went to his front gate and in a very short time the fight was on.—Harrodsburg Herald.

THE FIRST CHOICE.

It Was Right, Too, Because the Bravest Are the Tenderest.

Some years ago the excursion steamer returning from Alaska to Seattle dislocated its propeller in a dreary portion of the inner passage and came to a forced stop. For two days the vessel's engineers and machinists labored to repair the break, but without success. Two of the boats were manned and dispatched for aid to Victoria, 200 miles away. In the meantime it was discovered that the ship's stores were not abundant. Alarm bred in the minds of pessimistic passengers, and the contagion spread. Starvation might assail the vessel before help arrived.

A former California official took it on himself to reassure his timid companions, but his effort was not perfectly adapted to raise drooping spirits. In fact, his closing sentence be added to the gloom. "Let us be brave," he said. "If the worst comes and that dread necessity which in such mixed ventures has most often to be faced by us, let us remember that it is good to die that our friends may live. The one or more that may be sacrificed will be consoled by that thought."

There was a moment's silence, awful in its intensity, then a cheerful voice was heard. "You should be taken first, Governor Booth. You know the bravest are the tenderest." And even the terror stricken smiled once more.—San Francisco Argonaut.

TAPA CLOTH.

Attire of the Native Hawaiians Before Civilization Arrived.

The "paper mulberry" tree (Broussonetia papyrifera) is the source of the famous "tapa cloth" of the Polynesian islands. This is a natural tissue and is derived from the inner bark and after being torn off in strips is scraped with shells and beaten with a mallet until it resembles a soft, flexible paper. The individual strips are united by overlapping the edges and beating the fibers together until large pieces of the tissue are formed.

It is said that before Hawaii was swept with the wave of civilization men and women were dressed in this natural bark cloth "tapa" or "kapa." The dress of the women consists of the "pa-u," or wrapper, composed of five thicknesses of tapa, about four yards in length by three in width, passed several times around the waist and extending below the knee. The dress of the men was the "malo," or girdle, about a foot in width and several yards long. A "kihei," or mantle, six feet square, was sometimes worn by both sexes. In former years these natural cloths were sometimes bleached to snowy whiteness or were dyed in colors and even printed or ornamented usually in checks or squares.—Exchange.

Her Qualification.

Father—Now, look here, you girl when you grow up one of you must be able to speak French and the other German. Brenda—All right, dad, and Muriel had better learn German, because she can gargle best.—Punch.

Assuring.

Have courage, count. Father won't hurt you! Why, he told me only yesterday that he'd be only too glad for you he certainly wouldn't do anything to damage you.—Life.

Equality may be all right, but no human power can convert it into a fact.—Balzac.

Diplomacy.

"But what made you irritate her so then?"

"I had to do it. I wasn't any too popular with the girl until her father forbade me the house."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

After Him.

Aunt Crabbe—I think it is my duty to tell you that I have heard from several sources that Mr. Brown is a very fast young man! Daisy—Fast as he is, I shall catch him yet, auntie!—London Fun.

Very Close.

Warden—How's the campaign going on your way? Sort of a close contest? Sellers (gloomily)—Closest I ever saw. Neither side is giving up a blamed cent.—Buffalo Courier.

Noted Prelate

William George McCloskey Bishop of Louisville Passes Away.

The Rt. Rev. William George McCloskey, Catholic Bishop of the diocese of Louisville, died Friday morning at 7:05 o'clock at the Preston Park Seminary, where for a long time the aged prelate had fought a losing battle with the infirmities incident to his great age.

Eighty-six were the years the distinguished churchman had lived, fifty-seven of which were spent in the service of mankind through the medium of the religion of the Church of Rome. Crowded into those years had been vast experience of men and affairs and much work for the glory and honor of the cause he had served.

Bishop McCloskey was the oldest member of the American hierarchy, and had been signally honored more than once by the head of the church at Rome.

The last hours of Bishop McCloskey were peaceful and painless. The stress and trials of eighty-six years had taken their toll of life—that is the story of his illness. He had been failing for long, and the end came as the natural sequence of the drain upon his physical forces—a drain from which he had no recourse.

The tolling of the bell of the Cathedral of the Assumption was the first intimation given publicly that the Bishop was dead.

Although he had been much of a recluse during the past two decades, owing to failing health Bishop McCloskey at one time was one of the most approachable of men. He had an especial fondness for the company and conversation of the newspaper men, and always made them welcome to his rectory whether he could give them the news they sought or not. He was a kindly and affable friend to all those with whom he was thrown into personal contact.

By reason of the failure in his health, several attempts had been made of late years to persuade Bishop McCloskey to accept the appointment of a coadjutor who could take the burden of affairs off his hands. Going on the strength of his spirit alone, the Bishop set a stern countenance against these suggestions, and insisted upon holding the affairs of his diocese in his own hands until death should relieve him of the burdens he had carried without complaint and with great ability during his lifetime.

On May 11, 1867, the Rt. Rev. M. Joseph Lavialle, Bishop of Louisville, died, and Pius IX, wishing to confer a new honor on Dr. William G. McCloskey, decided to bestow the bishopric on him, and on May 24, 1868, the rector of the new college in Rome was consecrated Bishop of this diocese.

On arriving in Kentucky in September 1868, he found sixty-four churches, mostly poor and unpretentious structures, in a comparatively young and poor diocese. The Cathedral St. Boniface's old church and St. Patrick's were at the time considered the three handsomest Catholic churches in the city.

At his death he has left thirty-six churches in the city alone and 163 in the diocese. Several are gems of architectural beauty. There were but two academies and two religious communities, where now are found many of each. There was only a small number of clergymen then, while now there are 141 secular and sixty-one religious priests, many of the former having received ordination at his hands.

The funeral services were held at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning from the Cathedral of the Assumption, at Louisville, and the interment was at Nazareth Tuesday afternoon.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a brick dust sediment, or settling, stringy or milky appearance often indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back are also symptoms that tell you the kidneys and bladder are out of order and need attention.

What To Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills almost every wish in correcting rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. Corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest because of its remarkable health restoring properties. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Mention this paper and remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

The friends of Hon. W. O. Claybrooke will be pleased to learn that he is being importuned by leading men from various sections of the State to become a candidate for Secretary of State in 1911. This we think would be a move in the right direction for the Democrats, as Mr. Claybrooke is quite popular in the State, and would add strength to the ticket. He served the people as a Representative from this county two terms and was appointed on several important committees and did some splendid work for the State. Of course the election is a long time off yet, but it will soon be time for the Democrats to consider who will be the candidates who can best succeed in placing the the control of Kentucky's affairs again in the hands of the Democrats. Mr. Claybrooke is well qualified to fill the position and would make a successful race.

Governor John A. Johnson, of Minnesota, died at Rochester, Minn. Tuesday morning following an operation. His death will be a distinct loss to the Democratic forces in the notion, as Gov. Johnson was a man of great ability and a recognized leader. That he was thrice elected Governor of his state shows the confidence the people had in his integrity and ability.

He was regarded as the best prospect for a Democratic nominee for the Presidency in 1912 and had he lived would doubtless have been nominated and elected.

Editor News-Leader

Through your columns I want to talk some to the old boys. Say boys do you remember 46 years ago today? Don't you think of Chicamauga today and how we marched all night and went into the fight without breakfast and fought all day and until 8 o'clock at night before we got anything to eat, and some of the boys never eat any more. Poor boys you died hungry but you died for the flag of your country I looked up an old testament this morning that I carried through the war to read the same chapter that I read that day. It was a habit of mine to read one chapter in the testament every day but I barely had time to read that day, and when night closed in around us there was no idle talk, there was a sadness on every face as we went about preparing our supper thinking of the boys left on the field, and we seriously asked ourselves what will tomorrow bring, the heavy rumbling of artillery and moving of infantry told us the great fight wasn't over. In the early dusk of the morning found us in line ready for the fray and it came, and the second day was worse than the first, and we left some more noble boys on the field. Night again closed the scene and we silently descended the low mountain and took up our march down the valley to Chattanoogo, thus ending one of the hardest fought battles of the civil war. Now boys I can't tell all as it happened, but as I am resting to-day I wanted to have a short talk with you as you perhaps remember more than I do. I don't think I will ever work as my more on the 19th and 20th of September, they shall be days of rest for me

Now boys I am done, why don't some of you talk some through the columns of the News-Leader I would enjoy a letter from any of you boys. but you haven't time to write, I know how busy you are by myself, the older we get the more work we try to do and the years slip by so fast that we haven't time to hoe our gardens over until September is here, but take time to rest boys for I know you are tired.

What to do in Case of Accident

If skin is broken apply Dr. Bell's Anti-Pain at once and the wound will heal quickly and never get sore. Used internally and externally.

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

For Burning Feet.

If one's feet burn and are dry they should after the evening bath be rubbed thoroughly dry and good cold cream with plenty of lanoline should be rubbed in. Several minutes should be spent on each foot and the superfluous cream removed with a bit of cold cotton for with cheesecloth. The latter, which is easily washed, should always be kept on hand when cold cream is used. After the cream is thoroughly rubbed in and the surplus removed the feet may be bathed with witch hazel or with cold water containing a little alcohol. This will stimulate the skin, and the cream already absorbed will prevent its drying the skin. Witch hazel is always good for the feet. If the feet perspire witch hazel or alcohol much diluted or a weak solution of alum water may be used to bathe them twice daily and oftener if convenient.

Pumpkin Marmalade.

Four pounds of pumpkin, three oranges, three lemons and four and one-half pounds of granulated sugar will make twelve jelly glasses of delicious marmalade. Use the small pie pumpkins. Pare, slice and cut in cubes. Sprinkle sugar over dry, mix, let stand overnight. It will make a syrup. Add the juice of the oranges and lemons, but boil the rinds of the two last mentioned fruits until tender. Chop fine and add to the pumpkin. Simmer slowly for two hours. Do not let it get mushy. Use pancake turner to stir fruit, which you wish to preserve as whole as possible.

Jellied Veal.

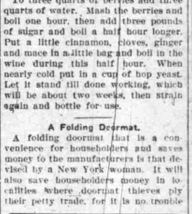

Boil three pounds of stewing veal until tender, seasoning with salt and pepper while cooking. Have a pint of liquor left when done, remove the bones and chop meat fine. Have ready three hard boiled eggs, sliced thin. Butter the mold, lay sprigs of parsley over the bottom, then a layer of eggs, then add the meat, pour the liquor over all, cover with a plate and set in a cool place. This should stand overnight. Before serving turn on a plate with the ornamental side up.

Elderberry Wine.

To three quarts of berries add three quarts of water. Mash the berries and boil one hour, then add three pounds of sugar and boil a half hour longer. Put a little cinnamon, cloves, ginger and mace in a little bag and boil in the wine during this half hour. When nearly cold put in a cup of hop yeast. Let it stand till done working, which will be about two weeks, then strain again and bottle for use.

A Folding Doormat.

A folding doormat that is a convenience for householders and saves money to the manufacturers is that devised by a New York woman. It will also save householders money in localities where doormat thieves ply their petty trade, for it is no trouble at all to fold it up at night and stick it in the vestibule. The mat is made of metal, with two side bars and a surface of pivotally connected slats, folding like gates. Attached to opposite ends of the side bars are crossbars, by ringlets of which the mat may be held in position when in use.

Care of Polished Tables.

After each meal, when the bare table is used, wring a soft cloth out of very cold water and go over the table top quickly that the varnish may not be softened, to remove spots made during the meal, and then rub thoroughly dry with a soft cheesecloth to polish. About once in three months a little good polish may be used, thus getting good results with little trouble.

Salted Almonds.

Blanch almonds by pouring boiling water over them and let them stand until skins are easily removed; place almonds in a little oil or butter, sprinkle them with salt and set in oven until brown.

To Improve Coffee.

Add to the pot of coffee when ready to serve a half teaspoonful of vanilla and a pinch of baking soda the size of a bean. The soda destroys the sour taste caused by the free acid in the coffee.

Excessive Perspiration.

An excellent powder for excessive perspiration is made of pulverized calamine, two drams; pulverized Florentine orris root, one ounce; pulverized starch, three ounces.

Finishing Skirt Seams.

Do not finish the seams of a skirt as a French seam. Either bind, overcast or pink them. French seams are more suitable for underwear or shirt waists.

Norwegians Are Cautious.

A good story of modesty in Norway is going the rounds. In many parts of that land of midnight sun motorcars are unknown and, thanks to the mountains, are likely to remain so. In the district in question a rumor went forth that a car was coming, and the authorities actually went to the trouble of issuing notices, which were posted about far and wide warning all and sundry that such was the case. Not only were the people cautioned to give the car a wide berth, but they were told to remove their animals into safe quarters.

It so happened that the car was driven through a desolate land, much to the amusement or wonder, one fancies, of its owner. All the people were inside their houses, and all the cattle had been driven into safe quarters for the occasion.—Indianapolis Star.

Painfully Polite.

Lieutenant Shackleton in a speech in reply to the toast of his health told an interesting story of politeness in the untrodden regions of the antarctic. His party, he said, were always extremely good humored and polite, and one professor in particular attained a degree of politeness unusual under such trying circumstances. "Are you busy, Mawson?" he called out one night to another member of the party who was in the tent. "I am," said Mawson. "Very busy?" said the professor. "Yes, very busy." "If you are not too busy, Mawson, I am down a crevasse." The professor was found hanging down a crevasse by his four fingers, a position which he could not have occupied for any length of time.

Accounting For It.

Outgoing heads of the government departments sometimes make a few "personal" promotions upon the eve of their departure, and a clerk in the department of agriculture, believing that Secretary Wilson would go the way of the rest of the Roosevelt cabinet, ventured to approach him with a little modest special recognition.

"I have been in the department since the time you were first made secretary"—the clerk began.

"I know it—I know it," the secretary said, waving him away. "Every one knows I am a very patient and considerate man!"—Harper's Weekly.

Constantinople Women and veils.

What does liberty mean to the Turks? Many things—chiefly the lifting off of a great weight of numbing fear. Mehrabeth freely. For the first time in thirty years they could talk, read, meet their friends, associate with foreigners and travel freely from place to place. "I have never lived till now," said a young Turk to me. Among the Turkish women the general emancipation produced its extraordinary effect, but it was short lived. They threw off their veils; they came out from behind their close latticed window into the streets and public places; they went to theaters and cafes and drove side by side with men in open carriages. The more ardent spirits held an open meeting in Constantinople, at which the women who spoke demanded that the century old shackles be broken asunder. The thing was too novel to last. After a week or two remonstrances began. Carriages were stopped and some of the women roughly handled by the crowd. They felt instinctively that they had gone too far. They drew back. The veils reappeared—perhaps not drawn quite so closely as before. They were not always very closely drawn before.—From "Turkey in Revolution," by C. R. Buxton.

Ormsby Shewmaker died Monday night after a lingering illness of inflammatory rheumatism. He was a son of Mr. Frank Shewmaker of Mackville and was about 21 years old. He was a very popular young man possessing great business energy He is survived by his father, one sister and two brothers.

The funeral services were conducted from the Methodist church at Willisburg Tuesday afternoon, interment in cemetery at Willisburg.

Nad Hardin Re-arrested.

Notorious "Nad" has again put in his appearance in Springfield. He has been gone nearly six weeks and as was naturally to be expected that was about as long as he could stay away.

It was learned yesterday that he was in Hockertown and Marshal Grace and Jailer Catlett proceeded to that section of the city and succeeded in locating him in a house there. Discovering the officers he jumped from an upstairs window and started to run. Several shots were fired at him before he stopped and surrendered. He was again placed in jail where he has been wanted for some time to work out an old fine. He was not hit by any of the shots but suffered a sprained ankle in his leap.

Royalty-Selecman.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Mr. William R. Selecman, to Miss Virginia Royalty. The wedding will take place at the home of the bride about the middle of October. Perhaps because of the revolution western Europe is full of Turks this year—Turks in costume, merchants, politicians, travelers. Some take their wives along—not common in past years—curious, silent, veiled or half veiled little shuffling women.

There is in London a school for mothers. One poor woman was dissolved in tears when her baby was undressed at the hospital and its wasted limbs revealed. She incoherently explained her grief by saying that "it was a beautiful child last time it was undressed."

Manitoba became a province in 1870. Its population was 62,260 in 1881, 152,506 in 1891 and 255,211 in 1901. The raise of Manitoba's harvest last year was a little short of $70,000,000. The census of 1906 gave Winnipeg, its capital city, a population of 90,000. There is nothing wild in a guess that its present population is not far from 120,000.

EYES TESTED

Ed. M. Russell,
EWELER AND OPTI

COMPANY'S MASCOT.

It was on the morning of Sept. 7, 1863, that the Confederate General Frazier was asked by General Burnside to surrender Cumberland gap. As General Buckner had retreated toward Chattanooga while General Burnside's forces lay at the gap, the garrison felt secure against attacks by the Confederates. The Federal army was in possession of Knoxville, and General Burnside had ordered to the gap sixteen [illegible] and [illegible] trains of artillery. [illegible] General Frazier, was about 1,000 strong, stationed at Morristown, where he could control the railroad with supplies for General Buckner's army. The former was ordered to meet the advance of the Federals, who were marching toward Jonesville.

His hope was, we afterward learned, that a part of General R. E. Lee's army of northern Virginia would reenforce him before our march of thirty-six miles could be made. But he had reckoned without the Union host. We showed a front so formidable that General Frazier wisely laid down his arms, and Generals Buckner and Jones fled across the mountains of east Tennessee.

General Longstreet had evidently expected that General D. H. Hill's corps that occupied a secure position at Cattott's gap, in Pigeon mountain, which was about fifteen miles from Chattanooga, a spur of Lookout mountain, would come to his relief, but as Generals Hindman and Hill still hoped for succor from Buckner the opportunity to evacuate voluntarily was lost.

It was at this juncture that General Thomas moved upon Hill's left wing and closed the gateway to Buckner's force. This was the turning point in the speedy victory for the Union in Tennessee. It was at Gordon's Mills that we met General Pat Cleburn.

A crash of musketry made us reel early in the engagement, and the fire was so terrific that we were obliged to withdraw to a better position on the hill. Then night came on.

General Cleburn's men were just over the brow of the hill, so close that we could hear their voices as they called back and forth to each other. Like ours, their camp was unlighted. Every well regulated company, it is said, owns to a mascot. The mascot of Company H was Teddy. If he had any other name we did not know it, and I doubt if he did. He was a harmless sort of half wit who had followed the army from the Ohio border. He was a happy-go-lucky wight, rarely understanding the simplest things said to him, but his unfailing cheerfulness and good nature had won for him the honor place of mascot of the company. He was the possessor of a very fine regimental flag, and he seemed not to know how it became his, but his devotion to it was so absolute that we had learned to respect it.

The Confederates were early astir, and we could hear the horses champing their bits and the men exchanging words about the preparations for the day. Of course they tried the bluff game on us of raising shouts every now and then as if re-enforcements had come. We were ready for the hard day to come, resting on our arms, waiting for the signal of battle.

Suddenly, about 7 o'clock, a flurry was felt in the air, and a crash came. General Cleburn's men had struck our right wing, and that awful rebel yell sounded in our ears, sharply reverberating through the pass, and we knew that something unexpected had occurred. We had no time to question what that might be, but later we learned that General Buckner's men had strengthened our neighbor's force and that we were in for the conflict for good or ill. We were surprised, for we had not expected it to occur until much later in the day. The din became horrible. Somehow we felt that a crisis not altogether to be desired by us was at hand.

At this desperate juncture Teddy was seen to run to the rear and plant himself on a hillock some 200 yards away. Here he unfurled his flag. I shall never forget the thrill that swept my soul as the folds of that splendid banner floated to the breeze. Was it his appeal to high heaven in our behalf?

I wondered then; I think so now. The sun seemed to wrap its stars and stripes in a very glory of brightness. Then the band played, as if answering the call of its colors, "The Star Spangled Banner," and a shout to match that of the rebels rose on the air.

The flag with the cross of the south was plainly to be seen in the advancing line. Suddenly the maddening cries of the Confederates ceased, and we saw their columns waver, the flag come down, and there followed a clear, determined retreat. It is a matter of history to those who bore the brunt of that unexpected attack that if the enemy had carried out their original intention to engage us before the second division came to our relief the history of that "battle among the clouds" would have had a different telling. After all, it is but the repetition of the fact that we are the creatures of circumstances. An officer taken prisoner at the fight told us that when the Confederates saw the flag and "knew that we had been re-enforced they thought it best not to force the fight, as without Buckner's help it would have been a terrible disaster."

And so it was that Teddy's flag, the mascot of Company H, had done the work. You may call it a special providence if you will, but the facts are as I tell them and as many a bluecoat whose nostrils were blackened by powder that day at Gordon's Mills will testify.

The Heron's Lesson.

A heron, bird of long beak and tall legs, was going along a river. He saw any quantity of carp and pike (the heron is a great eater of fish), and he could easily have caught them, but he wasn't hungry. This was a very good reason. A few moments later his appetite came back to him, and he returned to the edge of the water to find something to eat. But the pike and the carp were no longer there. It was a great loss for him. He saw some [illegible] but this did not please him. He wanted something more solid.

"Me eat [illegible]!" he exclaimed. "[illegible] take me for?"

[illegible] he found some gudgeons.

"Gudgeons! Did any one ever see a heron eat such small fry? What—open my beak for so little!"

Hunger overtook him, and in his extreme want, not being able to find anything else, he was glad enough to run across a snail.

Disdain nothing, and don't be so difficult to please. Often in being willing to gain too much we run the risk of losing everything.

The Dancing Pea

Push a pin halfway through a green pea, making the two ends as nearly as possible the same weight—i. e., let the point come a little more than halfway through. Then break off the stem of a common clay pipe, and the toy will be completed. To make the pea dance put it on top of the pipestem, the point of the pin sticking down the bore. Throw your head back with the pipe in your mouth so that the stem may be held vertically and blow gently. This will make the pea rise. Keep blowing harder until the pea rises entirely from the pipe and is supported in the air. It will now begin to spin round and round and turn over and over, all the while bobbing up and down, as long as the current of air is kept up. The dance may be changed by [illegible] the pin up to its head. The pea will now rise to the top of the pipe and dance slowly and with great dignity around the edge, or if the blast is a little stronger it will spin rapidly unless the blower stops to laugh, when it is apt to fall into the open mouth below.

A Shy Horse.

Once, long time ago, there was a man who owned a fine horse, which was very shy of an open umbrella and was not safe when he saw one.

He often thought how he could break the horse of this bad habit.

After thinking a long time he decided to put a potato on the end of a closed umbrella, as the horse was very fond of potatoes. He repeated this several mornings until the horse was not shy of it.

Then he opened the umbrella a little more each day until he could open it all the way.

But the horse's master was not sure the plan would do out of doors.

One rainy day he took the horse out of doors and, of course, he soon met some umbrellas. Instead of being frightened he went toward the umbrellas expecting to get a potato.

The horse did not get one, but when he reached home he had several.

After that he never feared an umbrella. So you see it takes kindness and patience to get along with animals.

The Little Princesses.

There were once three princesses. Their mother, the queen, was dead, and there was going to be a new queen. Now, the question was, Who was it going to be?

Once the three princesses were sitting in the garden. The youngest one, whose name was Irene, said: "I am going to be queen. I am smarter than you are."

"No, I am," said Miriam. "I am twice as smart as you. I am older and more able to rule the people than you are."

The oldest one, Rosa, did not speak thus. She said, "I do not fight with my sisters."

The king happened to pass by the garden where they were sitting. He said, "Rosa, you are queen, because you did not fight with your sisters."

And Rosa was the queen, and a good one at that.

The Quakers' Meeting.

The players kneel upon the ground on one knee and rest their hands upon the other knee, twiddling their thumbs all the time. The one at the head of the line asks the others:

"Friends, did you hear of Brother Obadiah's death and how he died?" The answer will be, "No; how did he die?" Then the leader says, "With one finger up, with one eye shut and with one shoulder awry." As he speaks he must suit his actions to his words, and the company must follow suit. Should any one fail to do so they must pay a forfeit.

Animals In Paradise.

According to the Mohammedan creed, ten animals are admitted into paradise. These ten are the dog, Baalam's ass, Solomon's ant, Jonah's whale, the ram of Ishmael, the queen of Sheba's ass, the camel of Salt, the cuckoo of Bilkis, the ox of Moses and the animal called Al Borah, which conveyed Mohammed to heaven.

"Leavings."

When the ice cream has emptied out
And has been helped around
Our mother brings the freezer out
And sets it on the ground.

She gives us three a spoon apiece
And says, "Now scrape away,"
Then leaves it all to Jack and me
And little sister May.

—St. Nicholas.

The Kind Cat.

A neighbor of old Mrs. Harrington killed a fine pig one day. He cut it up and hung the pieces in his woodshed. Mrs. Harrington's cat climbed into the shed that night, stole a large pork chop and carried it home to her mistress. The minister happened to call on the old lady the next day. She was just frying the chop. She told the minister how miraculously it had been brought to her by the cat.

"And, oh, sir," she said piously, "it was almost beautiful to see the way the sweet animal brought me the pork chop. It quite recalled to my mind what we read in Holy Writ about Elijah and the ravens."—Exchange.

The Courtship Gate.

We have been shown a design for an upholstered front gate which seems destined to become very popular. The footboard is cushioned, and there is a warm soapstone on each side, the inside step being adjustable, so that a short girl can bring her lips to the line of any given mustache without trouble. If the gate is occupied at 10:30 p. m., an iron hand extends from one gate post, takes the young man by the left ear, turns him around, and he is at once started toward home by a steel foot. The girl can, if she likes, set this part at a later hour than 10:30.—Jones County (Ga.) News.

Gibraltar's Searchlight Battery.

For ships to pass around Gibraltar, England's and the world's greatest fortress, without being observed even at night is a practical impossibility, owing to the great battery of searchlights arranged along the bottom of the rock. A ship running either in or out runs into one of the fixed beams of light and is revealed. A moving beam of light then follows her until the lookout officers are satisfied as to her intentions.—Popular Mechanics.

Clothes.

"Clothes don't make the man," quoted a sage.

"They made me!" said a retired tailor.

"And where should I be if it wasn't for suits?" chimed in a lawyer's clerk.

Something From Nothing.

"It is impossible to take something from nothing," quoted the wise guy. "Well, you come pretty close to it when you take the conceit out of some [illegible] simple mug."—Phil[illegible]

Woman's Beauty

Some women retain their beauty to an advanced age. But women, who regularly endure pain, age rapidly, for suffering leaves its lasting marks on them.

Nearly all women suffer more or less with some form of female trouble. It should not be neglected. Avoid the pain—treat yourself at home by taking Cardui; as thousands of other women have done. Begin at once and give Cardui a fair trial.

TAKE CARDUI

J 30

It Will Help You

Mrs. Katie Burlison, Goreville, Ill., tried Cardui and writes: "I suffered with female troubles, and was so sick I could not stand on my feet. Finally I began to take Cardui, and soon began to mend. Now I am able to do all my housework and am in much better health than I was before." Try it.

AT ALL DRUG STORES

GOOD JOCKEYS SCARCE.

Shilling, Powers and Taplin About the Best at Present.

While the country is not as well provided with jockeys this year as usual, there are sufficient riders, but few stars.

Probably Shilling is the premier, but on account of wishing to get out of his contract with R. L. Thomas, for whom he rides, he went to Vancouver, B. C., thinking himself out of reach. Mr. Thomas finally succeeded in getting him back, and he has again resumed riding. His services are much sought after, and John E. Madden is one of his patrons.

V. Powers is probably next best, and he is under contract to Barney Schreiber, Tom Shaw having second call. Powers is in good demand all the time, and there are few races in which he fails to have a mount. He is a strong finisher, but at times very listless, and he was much censured for a ride he put up on Queen Marguerite at Yonkers.

R. Scoville is E. R. Bradley's boy. James R. Keene has second call on him, and he also rides for Woodford Clay. His work has been clean and good throughout, and he is always able to get a mount when free from contract engagements. Eddie Dugan has lost friends through his rough riding, and he is constantly in trouble on this account. He is a finished rider, and when he has the mount he can be depended upon to win. He is very alert at the post and, after W. Miller, the best post rider seen on New York tracks in the last two or three years. August Belmont has first call on him. He also rides for Harry Payne Whitney and the Newcastle stable. Tom Welch is one of his stanchest friends.

EDDIE TAPLIN, ONE OF THE LEADING JOCKEYS IN EAST.

Eddie Taplin is now a full fledged jockey, his apprenticeship having just expired. He has won a number of races for his employer, H. G. Bedwell, and has attracted more favorable criticism than any of the youngsters riding this season. He uses excellent judgment in long races, waits patiently and generally has something left to finish with. His riding pleased John Sanford so much that he obtained second call on his services.

Butwell rides for Walter House and is doing good work in spots. He is a strong finisher, plucky and uses good judgment. Glass is an apprentice and one of the best. He is under contract to A. G. Blakely, and, being very light, his services are in demand by prominent stables—James R. Keene's and others.

OPEN GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP.

Dates and Conditions For Big New York Tournament Sept. 16 and 17.

Details of the Metropolitan open golf championship, to be held at the Wykagyl Country club, New Rochelle, N. Y., Sept. 16 and 17, have been announced. The tournament is open to amateurs and professionals of all sections.

As previously, the contest will be at seventy-two holes, medal play. The first prize is to be $150 in cash and a gold medal; the second, $100. All told there are eight cash prizes and $60 in special prizes for low scores by rounds and days.

On Sept. 15, before the tournament, there will be an open invitation eighteen holes medal play, four ball (best ball) match, the teams consisting of an amateur and professional. The prizes are to be $100, $60 and $40.

COMING SPORT EVENTS

Packey McFarland and Ray Bronson will box twenty rounds at 135 pounds in New Orleans Sept. 12.

The annual intercollegiate golf championship tournament will be held over the Apawamis club links, Rye, N. Y., Sept. 13 to 18. Monday and Tuesday will be devoted to team matches, the individual championship starting on Wednesday with a thirty-six hole qualifying round. The final round on Saturday will consist of thirty-six holes.

The football squad of the University of Pennsylvania will start practice shortly. Most of last year's team have been ordered to report at Beach Haven, N. J., where the preliminary work will be held. This, however, will be of the lightest order.

Jack O'Neil of Halifax, this year's winner of the national sculling championship at Detroit and the first man to take the title from the United States since the championship event was started ten years ago, may row in a special race in the annual regatta of the New England Rowing association on the Charles river, Boston, Sept. 6.

ALEXANDER'S SNAKE.

A Story of Magic and Credulity In the Olden Days.

No snake that ever lived won greater fame for the time than Alexander's. Lucian tells the story. Apollonius, a master of the magic arts, had many disciples, among whom was a practicing physician who lived in Abootichus, a small town on the shore of the Black sea. There Alexander was born of humble parentage and imbibed from the old doctor all that he had learned from Apollonius of medicine and magic. He was a lad of striking appearance, tall, handsome, with a fine head of hair, lustrous brown eyes and a voice sweet and limpid. "God grant," wrote Lucian, who knew him, "that I may never meet with such another. His coming was wonderful, his dexterity matchless. His eagerness for knowledge, his capacity for learning and power of memory were equally extraordinary."

Such was the well favored young peasant who sallied forth from his native town in search of fame and fortune. Soon he fell in with one Coconnas, a shrewd tipster for the races and somewhat of a juggler. The two rogues joined forces and meandered about telling fortunes. Arriving at Pella, they found a great number of huge, harmless snakes which lived in the houses, played and slept with the children and destroyed poisonous rats. Alexander promptly purchased one of the largest, a veritable monster, so tame that it would coil about his body and remain in any desired position. Then he made a human face for it out of linen, painted it ingeniously and shaped it so that the mouth would open and shut by an arrangement of horsehair, letting the forked tongue shoot in and out at the will of the master. Having no further use for Coconnas, he either administered poison to him or let him die from some infection and returned with his snake to his native town. There he declared himself a prophet and announced that the god Aesculapius was about to appear. The people were credulous, excitable and eager for a new divinity.

When the great day arrived Alexander pretended to discover in a puddle of water a goose egg which he had placed there after removing the contents, substituting a small embryo snake just born and carefully sealing the shell with wax. When the multitude had gathered he broke the shell and produced the tiny creature, which in a few moments grew to be the monster from Pella by the simple process of substitution. Thereafter the big snake, believed to be Aesculapius, led a busy life. He gave seances, told fortunes in writing and even spoke freely, with the aid of the prophet's ventriloquial powers. Alexander grew rich and powerful, kept a small army of retainers and spies, wielded no little influence over the government even at Rome and died at a ripe old age in the fullness of his renown. What became of the snake nobody knows. Probably at the last the prophet dispatched the faithful creature to prevent the discovery of his deception after his death.—George Harvey in North American Review.

Presence of Mind.

Mayor Stoy of Atlantic City was praising the remarkable efficiency of his corps of life guards.

"These men have presence of mind," he said, "the right kind of presence of mind, not the wrong kind—everybody has that.

"I used to know," Mayor Stoy continued, "an aged duck hunter that we called Old Presence of Mind.

"We called him Old Presence of Mind because he once went ducking in a sneak box with a friend. The bay roughened up, and the friend fell overboard. But as he was sinking in the icy water he managed to clutch with his chilled hand the edge of the frail little sneak box.

"The old duck hunter used to conclude this thrilling tale with the words:

"'And, gents, if I hadn't had the presence of mind to unship an oar and whack him over the fingers I'd have been drowned, as he was.'"

A wise man thinks before he speaks, but a fool speaks and then thinks of what he has been saying.

An Athletic Game.

The cobbler's shop in a small village was filled with old men and a young man, the young man being a good football player. Naturally the conversation drifted to the game of football.

The young man turned to one of the old men and asked him if he had ever played the game. The veteran thoughtfully blew a cloud of tobacco smoke from his lips and replied:

"Nay, lad. I've never played at none o' them athletic games 'cept dominos."—London Mail.

WOMAN AND FASHION

A Sleeping Car Robe.

What to wear in the sleeping car is always a very important question to women when going on a journey. An ordinary bath robe may do, but to the simplicity of that garment have been added many features which a feminine tourist will appreciate—a hood to hide her disheveled tresses, a deep pocket and adequate fastenings. The robe here pictured is of light blue cotton crape. It is made amply full and will appeal to the woman who wishes to appear as neatly clad as possible when passing to the lavatory.

The trimming is of china silk in Persian design, and the robe is fastened with loops made of the silk and large button molds, also covered with silk.

The Directoire Gown a Blessing.

There is an interesting fact about the much talked of directoire styles which has been pretty generally overlooked. Most people who talk or write about the slender, willowy effect of the new fashions refer to them as if they were decidedly injurious and as if women were undergoing great torture in giving themselves the long straight lines that the styles demand.

But, as a matter of fact, the change in the figure has been decidedly beneficial.

It sounds startling, but the directoire styles have done more for hygienic dressing than any dress reform movement ever started.

In reducing the hips the waist measure has been enlarged, and as soon as the waist was enlarged the diaphragm was let loose and women breathed. The corsetieres have risen to the occasion, and are now vying with one another in the production of hygienic corsets. The poor diaphragm, too, has responded to every act of kindness and natural breathing is now the rule among all women who really know what is up to date. And with natural breathing come a correct and dignified poise, grace of movement and bust and lung development, all of which are undeniably desirable. So it will be a sorry day, after all, when the much ridiculed tube gown disappears and hips again proclaim their existence.

Fad For Colored Blouses.

The fad of the moment for lemon color, or canary color, as it is more frequently called, is evidenced in many of the expensive lingerie blouses. For wear with a pongee or linen suit of this shade it is the acme of summer time coolness, at least so far as appearance goes.

One delightfully dainty blouse in this coloring was recently seen. The entire fabric of canary colored mull was worked in eyelet embroidery in white, a jabot of plaited white mull with a canary colored border finishing the front from the neck to the waist line. This was worn with a tailor made linen suit of the same shade and a black hat turned up sharply on one side.

A Normal Waist Once More.

The waist line is quietly settling back into its original and natural position. The more the frock is draped the more it will take the waist line into its old place.

That the return of the pointed bodice is not far off was indicated in a costume by a famous designer of Paris worn by the leading lady in a fashionable theater in London recently. It was of cerise tussore, the bodice cut very long and quaintly at the back. With it was worn a Puritan collar of valenciennes lace.

A Clever Device.

A clever device for overcoming the shrinkage at the bottom of a wash skirt is to run a tuck around the lower inside edge of the hem. First outline with basting thread the lower edge of the skirt where it is to be turned up, then run in the tuck before the skirt is turned up and sewed. Before sending the skirt to the laundry rip out the tuck and there will be sufficient length to allow for shrinkage.

The Country Cousin.

Glenn H. Curtiss, discussing aviation with a New York reporter, said, with smiling impatience:

"Really, though, your questions show a remarkable ignorance of the principles of flight. If you are going to report aeronautical things, why don't you read up aeronautics? Your questions, as it is, denote an ignorance equal to the westerner's.

"This westerner on a visit to his rich Pittsburg cousin came down to breakfast every morning with the same genial question:

"'How is things?'

"One morning the rich cousin, his nerves being a little on edge, scowled a black scowl at this question and said:

"'Why the dickens do you always say "How is things?" Jethro?'

"Jethro looked surprised and hurt.

"'Because,' he answered, 'I want to know how things is; that's why.'"

Under Examination.

"Do you know the prisoner well?" asked the attorney.

"Never knew him ill," replied the witness.

"Did you ever see the prisoner at the bar?"

"Took many a drink with him," was the reply.

"How long have you known this man?"

"From two feet up to five feet ten."

"Stand down," yelled the lawyer in disgust.

"Can't do it," said he. "I'll sit down or stand up."

"Officer, remove that man." And he did.

Epilepsy, Fits

"My son was cured of a very bad case of epilepsy with Dr. Miles' Nervine."

MRS. D. BAKER, Cleveland, O.

"My little daughter who was afflicted with St. Vitus' Dance is now entirely well after taking Dr. Miles' Nervine only four months."

MRS. C. G. BENNETT, Alma, Mich.

Epilepsy, Fits, St. Vitus' Dance and Spasms, are all nervous diseases. They have been cured in so many instances with Dr. Miles' Nervine that it is reasonable to conclude that it is almost sure to cure you. With nervous diseases of a severe type, persistent use has almost invariably resulted in a complete cure or lasting benefits, worth many times the cost of the remedy. The best evidence you can get of its merits is to write to those who have used it. Get a bottle from your druggist. Take it all according to directions, and if it does not benefit he will return your money.

Remedies are Needed

Were we perfect, which we are not, medicines would not often be needed. But since our systems have become weakened, impaired and broken down through indiscretions which have gone on from the early ages, through countless generations, remedies are needed to aid Nature in correcting our inherited and otherwise acquired weaknesses. To reach the seat of stomach weakness and consequent digestive troubles, there is nothing so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a glyceric compound, extracted from native medicinal roots—sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users. For Weak Stomach, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Pain in the Stomach after eating, Heartburn, Bad Breath, Belching of food, Chronic Diarrhea and other Intestinal Derangements, the "Discovery" is a time-proven and most efficient remedy.

The genuine has on its outside wrapper the Signature R. V. Pierce, M.D.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic, medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

Women Suffer Agonies from Diseased Kidneys

And Most Women Do This Not Knowing the Real Cause of their Condition

These poor, suffering women have been led to believe that their misery of mind and body is entirely due to "ills of their sex." Usually the kidneys and bladder are responsible—or largely so. And in such cases, the kidneys and bladder are the organs, that need and must have attention.

Those torturing, enervating sick headaches, dragging pains in back, groin and limbs, bloating and swelling of the extremities, extreme nervousness or hysteria, listlessness and constant tired, worn-out feeling—are almost certain symptoms of disordered and diseased kidneys, bladder and liver.

DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills have, in thousands of cases, been demonstrated as remarkably beneficial in all such conditions of female organism—affording the most prompt relief and permanent benefit.

As an illustration of what these Pills will do, Mrs. P. M. Bray of Columbus, Ga., writes that she was very ill with kidney trouble, and that she is now well—and that these Pills are what cured her.

They are very pleasant to take, and can in no case, produce any deleterious effects upon the system—as syrupy, alcoholic, liquid preparations are apt to do.

E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago, Ill., want every man and woman who have the least suspicion that they are afflicted with kidney and bladder diseases to at once write them, and a trial box of these Pills will be sent free by return mail postpaid. Do it to-day.
